The much-awaited Professional Practice Guidance (ProPG) on Planning & Noise is due for release in June 2017 and will detail a rigorous acoustic assessment methodology for new residential development sites, with emphasis on site-specific noise control measures.

ProPG is seen as the successor to PPG24, which was widely implemented by local planning authorities—and the new document is expected to be adopted similarly.

This seminar discusses the implications for upcoming projects, including:

Examination of the new Noise Risk Categories and the consequences for planning

Ways of achieving the requirements using Good Acoustic Design

The new Acoustic Design Statement documents and what they will involve

The seminar lasts around 45 minutes, plus time for questions.
